

Consciousness and Climate Change: Empowering People for a World in Transition

Venue: Brahma Kumaris Raja Yoga Meditation e.V.,
Sigmaringer Str.25, 10713 Berlin-Wilmersdorf; U-Fehrbelliner Platz,

Real, lasting change of any kind starts with the individual - with a change of consciousness. Seeing ourselves and our relationship with the earth from a broader, spiritual perspective can help us find the strength to make the changes in attitude and lifestyle, which nature is now demanding of us. Our greatest challenge at this point, along with informing and educating people, is to empower them: to inspire and enable individuals at all levels of society to do something positive and effective themselves. This is perhaps where spirituality has a unique role to play in shifting consciousness, building confidence and nurturing co-operation at this critical time of transition.

We invite you to join experts in various fields in exploring what kind of a shift in consciousness is needed.

What are the characteristics of a consciousness that nurtures sustainable decisions and behavior, in contrast to the dominant materialistic, fragmented mindset? What would foster a new, more sustainable consciousness, attitude and lifestyle? This event will also serve as a think-tank in preparation for a larger scale event in September 2017.

Keynote speakers are:

Prof. Dr. Ilan Chabay, Head of Strategic Research, Institute for Advanced Sustainability Studies (iass-potsdam.de), Chair of Knowledge, Learning, and Societal Change International Research Alliance (KLASICA.org), speaks about behavior change for sustainable futures.

Sonja Ohlsson, Meditation Teacher and International Coordinator of the Brahma Kumaris Environment Initiative speaks on what spirituality can offer to combat climate change.

Joachim Golo Pilz, Adviser Renewable Energy, Brahma Kumaris & World Renewal Spiritual Trust and Head of Project India-One offers examples on how consciousness creates action.

Dr. Marco Bischof, Future Science & Medicine European Creative Center Weissensee, author and consultant in frontier areas of science, brings in a perspective of a sustainable psychology and a more holistic understanding of environment.

The event is free of charge. The language is English.

Register online: click here or via: berlin@de.brahmakumaris.org

Organizer: The Brahma Kumaris (BK), a non-governmental organization with consultative status with the United Nations. Within the Environment Initiative the BK offers a range of seminars and workshops on ethical aspects dealing with the environment. www.eco.brahmakumaris.org